A laughable incident occurred in one of Seventh Street's department stores. It appears that the owner was renovating and painting the store when Horace DeVoung, one of Washington's most popular society men, entered the store and occupied a ckair which was just varnished. The result may be imagined. Mr. Young remarked that it was the varnish that holds. Enquiry revealed the fact that real Warren Co., 515 Ninth Street morthwest; suspoiled this firm with the paints and variants.

WITHOUT MOVING FUNDS

General Land and Indian Offices Must Stay Where They Are.

Congress Neglected to Provide Money for Their Transfer to the Old Postoffice Building-The Secretary of the Interior Does Not Feel Authorized to Have It Done,

It has been discovered that there is n appropriation with which to move the General Land and Indian offices to the old postoffice building, and that the crowded condition of things will have to remain in statu quo at the Patent Office, Atlantic Building, and Pension Office until Congress meets and provides funds for the removals.

At the last session Congress only appro riated money for the transfer of the Postoffice Department to the new building on Pennsylvania Avenue. The transfer of the General Land and Indian bureaus wa an after-adjournment consideration. In an after-adjournment confideration. In looking around for ways and means to speedily get into their new quarters, Commissioners Hermann and Jones were informed by the Secretary of the Interior that he had no appropriation or authority to incur the expense of several hundred dollars for the proposed removal, which means that authority would have to come from Congress before he would feel jus-tified in making contracts for moving tified in making contracts for moving these bureaus.

There is an enormous accumulation of records and furniture in the General Land Office, which alone occupies nearly one-half of the great Patent Office Building. This structure is more than twice as large as the building to which they will go, the old postoffice site occupying but one square of ground, whereas the more modern Patent Office Building occupies two squares. It is said, therefore, that the General Land Office will immediately need every nook and corner of the old Postoffice Building, and there will be no room for the Indian Bureau, the Geological Survey, and the Railroad and Mail Division of the Pension office, which it was proposed should occupy jointly the quarters with the General Land

Commissioner Evans has been auxious to secure new space for the mail division of the Pension Office, so that the present puarters of that division, which are in the quarters of that division, which are in the northeast corner of the Pension Office Building, could be turned over to the new division to be known as the "Spanish War Division" of the Pension Office. Now that a halt will be called in the removal arrangements of all these bureaus, the prospect is bright for the old Postoffice Building to remain vacant from the time the Postoffice Department is removed until Congress meets, when it is proposed to ask Congress for a thorough renovation or a remodeling of the old structure before it is again occupied. It is said this should be done anyhow, but especially if it cannot be reoccupied until the action of Cougress. again occupied.
